Reading Aid

This representation of the questionnaire contains the same informations as the portal paneldata.org.

Here, in addition to the question number, question text, interviewer instructions, and answer options, you find printed in green the file name and the variable name with the variable label, which contains information from the question. If you see rows of green lines below the answer option, the questionnaire defines serveral variables or informations are stored in more than one data set.
The routing by filters is depicted in blue.
Each variable is preceded by an identifier, which usually contains the question number and which is used when the variable is used in filters in subsequent questions. Such filters are usually placed as input filters (gatekeepers) at the beginning of a question. An identifier that is referred to in the input filter of a subsequent question is marked yellow as an example.
This reading aid does not cover a few exceptional cases: If the filter (as gatekeeper) only affects one of serveral variables for a question, the filter is printed in blue behind the variable. There you will also find a "go to" command in the form 2 @ Q73. Here, the questionnaire skips to question 73 if answer 2 was given.
Phrases that are not alreday translated in English are displayed in German and preceded by [de].

Is the respondent the head of household or the person who answers the questions about the household? The questions on the household should be answered by the person who knows most about the concerns of the total household and the other household members. Important Note: The questions on the household have to be filled out once for each household. Without this question part all other questions would be useless for data analysis!

286 Imagine a ladder representing the different social strata in Germany. At the top of the ladder, on the tenth rung, are the people who are doing best: They have the most money, the best education, and a highly prestigious job. At the bottom of the ladder, on the first rung, are the people who are doing the worst: They have the least money, the lowest level of education, and are unemployed or have a job that no one wants or respects.
Please think about where you currently stand on the ladder. On a scale of 1 (bottom) to 10 (top), please indicate which rung of the ladder corresponds to your current position in society.
You can use the values between 1 and 10 to indicate exactly where you stand.

459 Now we would like to ask you a few things regarding global warming. When "global warming" is mentioned below, it always refers to a comparison with pre-industrial levels.

460 "The latest Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change's (IPCC) Assessment Report (AR6), published in 2022, finds that every tenth of a degree of additional global warming will significantly escalate threats to people, species, and ecosystems. Even limiting global warming to 1.5°C above pre-industrial levels, a global target set by the Paris Climate Agreement, is not safe for all on earth. We are now at 1.1°C above pre-industrial levels. Based on current emissions, the world is likely to hit between 2.7°C and 3.1°C above pre-industrial levels of warming by 2100. The likelihood of exceeding 1.5°C above pre-industrial levels in the near term – before 2040 – is over 50%.In recent published work, a team of scientists, which includes several leading authors of the latest IPCC Assessment Report, provides estimates of global and regional impacts associated with the 1.5°C increase above pre-industrial levels in global mean temperature. These estimates include an increase in the annual likelihood of a major heatwave, defined as at least 4 days with maximum temperature greater than all but the hottest days in the period between 1981 and 2010.In the following, we want you to provide your best guess of the average annual likelihood of a major heatwave in a future with the 1.5°C warming above pre-industrial levels. If your answer is within 10 percent of the prediction of the scientists, you will receive a bonus of 5 Euro."

461 Between 1981 and 2010 the likelihood of a major heatwave in Western Europe (including Germany) was 4 percent. What is your best guess of the predicted likelihood of a major heatwave in Western Europe (including Germany) with 1.5 warming above pre-industrial levels?

491 In the following part of the survey, we are going to ask you a series of questions related to something called Foreign Direct Investment (FDI) in Germany. What is FDI? FDI is short for Foreign Direct Investment, which is a long-term investment in the home country (in this case the home country is Germany), made by another person or company from a foreign country, typically by opening a new plant or buying shares (normally at least 10%) of a domestic company. For instance, a company from France could build and open a new factory plant in Germany. Or, an American company could invest in a German car company by buying 30% of its shares. Both are examples of FDIs.

492 According to the most recent official statistics, the total FDI stock right now in Germany is 845 billion euros. In your best estimate, what percentages of the total Foreign Direct Investments in Germany are owned by companies that come from each of the following countries or regions?

Mainland China (excluding Hong Kong) [Share of total FDI in Germany]: 0:100

The United States [Share of total FDI in Germany]: 0:100

Other European Union countries [Share of total FDI in Germany]: 0:100

496 Now we will show you some opinions of politicians and experts on Chinese investments in Germany. Some German SMEs are facing insolvency for a variety of reasons or are unable to find a successor. Investments from abroad could save these companies from going bankrupt and preserve many jobs. Nevertheless, many German politicians and experts believe that selling these companies (or a significant share of the company) to Chinese companies would be a bad choice for the following reasons:

490;yan23_group=2

497 Economic aspects: Some politicians as well as experts argue that Chinese investments would not necessarily contribute to the preservation of jobs, as parts of the company could be relocated to China. Moreover, the key technologies of these German small and medium-sized enterprises would become the intellectual property of Chinese investors. This could endanger Germany's competitiveness and the prosperity of its citizens in the long term. Political aspects: Some politicians and experts also believe that Chinese investments would make Germany more dependent on China, which could impair Germany's political independence in the future.

Nevertheless, many German politicians and experts believe that selling these companies (or a significant share of the company) to Chinese companies would be a good choice for the following reasons:

490;yan23_group=3

499 Economic aspects: Some politicians and experts are of the opinion that Chinese investments could significantly simplify the access of German small and medium-sized enterprises to the huge sales market in China. This would enable German companies to increase their sales and thus not only secure jobs in Germany, but also invest in the further development of their key technologies and secure their long-term competitive advantage. Political aspects: Some politicians as well as experts argue that Chinese investments could contribute to a broad diversification of German economic linkages. This could reduce Germany's structural dependencies (for example on the USA or Russia) and thus strengthen its political independence overall.
